EQUALIZATION — part 1

The first question that pops out is "What's that?" followed by "Why?"

Equalization is a large word that describes a number of systems that are used in audio equipment. These systems vary from quite simple to rather complex in construction, depending on the mode of operation.

A simple system is used in the phono pre-amplifier for the sole purpose of compensating for the characteristics used in the recording process. This characteristic or curve that is used maintains for all frequencies of sound what is called constant velocity from the highest down to 400 cycles. Below this point a constant amplitude to the very lowest frequencies is handled by the system.

The purpose of the constant amplitude used for the low frequencies is to prevent the cutting stylus of the recorder from swinging extremely widely which would cut over the wall between the grooves. This would, of course, ruin the record. This constitutes a form of limiting and for a good purpose. The 400 cycles point is called a crossover since above this frequency there is no limiting required except the constant rate of movement of the surface past the cutting stylus.

The range of frequencies between 400 cps and 1500 cps is generally left alone. At 1500 cps comes the first addition of boost or pre-emphasis for all the high frequencies. Generally a moderate amount of boost is used between 3000 and 6500 cycles. A much more pronounced boost is added above 6500 cps since above this point the sound frequencies are of low level and easily lost in the noise developed by the cutting process.

In the playback mode a roll-off is used to reduce the boosting of the high frequency sounds, and a boosting network raises the sounds below 400 cps. The system is simple, consisting of only a few parts in conjunction with the first stage of amplification in the pre-amp section of the record player.

The RIAA curve was developed in the late 1950's and was used until recently. Slightly modified on the high roll-off, it specifies the way the material is recorded, its boosting or cutting, and the playback boost and cut. Thus, a total system is used that provides the best sound from records, one which did away with the several crossover points previously used by each manufacturer of records. Since it is used by both the record makers and by the manufacturers of audio equipment, there is no need for the person using a hi-fi system to have a unit with a large number of controls to correct for things. This confusion came to an end and sound quality went up and up, as did the top end high frequency sound capability of both disc and playback equipment. Witness the CD-4 system which works at 30,000 cps to provide quadrasonic sound.

IRC SPOTLIGHT

Bill Endicott
(President)

As is true with most of the INDIANA RECORDING CLUB officers, Bill lives in Indianapolis. His involvement with the club goes back many years, to 1964. Bill relates that when he purchased a tape recorder that year and mentioned it at work, "some guy" asked if he was going to join the recording club. That question led to a multitude of referrals until Bill finally found someone who could tell him about the IRC and give him a membership application, and he's been at it ever since! He says this has been FUN, EXASPERATING, AND CONFUSING at times BUT that there are a lot of NICE PEOPLE that he has met throughout the years. Bill has held many offices throughout the time he has been in IRC: treasurer for 1 year; Music Librarian for 4 years; Vice-President for 1970, 1971; Member of the Board for 1975; and President for "about 100 years," 1973, '74, and '76 to the present. Although being President takes up much of his time, Bill does maintain a more-than-full-time job, too — he is the owner of the Ripple Village Laundry in partnership with his youngest son. Bill and wife Mariellen have three children and five grandchildren. Bill lists as his hobbies 8-mm movies, coin collecting, bowling, and MUSIC, "and, of course, taping." The present Board of IRC, including the committee charimen, says Bill, needs to be commended for its willingness to work hard and its dedication to the IRC, for without the efforts of the entire staff, all of whom are volunteers, the IRC would be unable to function. It is this willingness to work together which has kept the IRC around while others have been forced to fold. Thanks, Bill, for your leadership.

Sharon

IT WORKS BETTER IF YOU PLUG IT IN!

That's what one of our new members discovered after she made a long distance call to report that she had received a welcome tape from one of Bill Kearney's Welcome Committee members, and the tape was blank. A letter was fired off to Bill to see that she was sent a tape with something on it, and then she discovered, to her embarrassment, that her recorder hadn't been plugged in.

We won't embarrass her any more by giving her name, but we do want to let her know that now she is a true member of the club, because most of us have found over the years, that there is a lot of truth in Murphy's Law, "If anything can happen, it will!"

PRESIDENT'S MIC

How would you like to have your picture seen and your voice heard by approximately 250,000 people, and help your club at the same time? You can - and here's how:

Next November the IRC will again have a booth set up at the Indianapolis Christmas Gift and Hobby Show. We have to start early, folks! This is our annual IRC membership drive. We are always on the alert for new members, but the hobby show is the big drive for the year. We not only acquaint people with our hobby, we also tell them about our club.

For those of you who would like to participate, and we hope you will, we are asking for a slide of yourself and a 45 to 60 second narration on a three inch tape or a cassette. Tell why you enjoy the IRC and/or the taping hobby.

All tapes must start with your name, city and state if you live in the U.S. If you live outside the U.S., your name, city and country. No street addresses please. All slides will become club property to be used for future hobby shows. Should you want your tapes returned to you, you must send a self addressed, stamped envelope.

All tapes and slides must be in by July 31, 1980. Please send them to me, Bill Endicott, 5629 Hillside Ave., Indianapolis, Indiana, 46220, U.S.A.

We are hoping for a lot of participation in this project, not only from members here in the U.S., but from our overseas members as well. I hope to see and hear from you soon - - or Hey, Hey, Hey, don't delay. Get those tapes and slides in right away!!!!

ORAL HISTORY

One of the biggest advantages of this modern-day age of electronics is the tape recorder. With this marvelous tool one is able to preserve for posterity the voices and remembrances of times past and present. Bill Kearney and Jerry Johnson have both sent in articles lately dealing with the acquisition of oral history. In fact, Bill is the president of the Indiana Oral History Association. Here are some hints from the Association's booklet "History on Tape" which are applicable for any taping session:

1. Have an idea of the topics to be covered;
2. Keep your equipment in good repair;
3. Be patient with the narrator of the tale — don't "jump in" with other questions;
4. Listen to the narrator and respond to his answers to previous questions;
5. Be flexible. Relax. HAPPY TAPING!

IRC DIRECTORY Is Too FAT! NEW STREAMLINED DIRECTORY IS COMING

Yes, all the supplement pages for listing new members, changes of address, etc., added in the last two years, have resulted in the directory putting on weight, so the time has come to trim away a little of the excess avoirdupois, by issuing a new directory.

This will be done as soon as enough time has elapsed to give everybody, including overseas members, an opportunity to return the questionnaires which were sent out with last month's Tape Squeal.

There is a space on the questionnaire for identifying a cassette recorder or deck as "mono" or "stereo". This designation was eliminated in the present directory, but a few complaints were received, so we're putting it back in.

If your present listing is O.K., do not return the questionnaire, but if you want anything changed, please return it as soon as possible if you have not already done so.

----- Eleanor Davies, Directory Manager

LIBRARIES NEED YOU!

Don't forget the IRC libraries! The Music Library, the Creative Library, the Voice of History Library, and the Old Time Radio Library are maintained for you! USE THEM for enjoyment and education. See page 5 of the Directory for the address of the librarian you wish to order from.
